Summary of Activities

The Metropolitan Museum of Art and PS/MS 95 collaborated to create a series of special family workshops. Families commit to three weekend visits at the museum. Students and parents are separated into two groups that explore, look at, and discuss works of art in adjacent galleries. Each group participates in a sketching and/or writing project. After the museum gallery experience, families participate in arts related projects in the museum studio. Parents and children work side by side to create works of art inspired by what they have seen in the collections.

Summary of Activities

The PS 193 community seeks to increase parent involvement in the arts through two programs. The first is a series of workshops that focus on families creating art and music together. In addition, we are seeking curatorial training for parents and students so they can organize an in-school museum devoted to art created by our students as a part of our week-long festival entitled "Arts on Parade". This week will culminate with a multi-cultural pot-luck dinner/dance that will feature a live performance and dance workshop with the Brazilian ensemble Nego Cato: From Congo to Brazil.

Summary of Activities

The goal of the Parents as Arts Partners program for PS 205 is to expand the school community by providing a program that involves parents and their children in arts activities that parallel and support programs the children participate in during the school day. In conjunction with a LEAP dance artist, the school presents a weekend dance program that will reflect one of the prominent cultures at our school. The dance program will be open to our students, parents, school staff, and PTA. Students and their parents will learn the joy of dancing as well as the cultural history of each of the dances. The culminating event will be a performance with an invited audience.

PS 224 will host six African/Modern dance classes for parents with their children. The sessions will be conducted by a guest dance artist from Arts America, Inc. The culminating event will be a dance piece performed by the parents with their children during the school's annual awards night presentation in the Spring of 2002. There will also be a trip to see a professional dance performance by the National Dance Theatre of Jamaica at the Brooklyn Center for the Performing Arts. This project is a great way for parents and children to work together cooperatively toward an artistic goal. It will help strengthen the bond between parents and children.

Parents and students will survey the urban architecture of our Bedford-Stuyvesant community with the guidance of the BCUE to study forms and history of the buildings, and use math skills to analyze them (counting, measuring, estimating). Students will also visit the rural architecture preserved at Weeksville to study early African American experiences in Brooklyn. Parents will help children create maps and graphs from data from what they have learned. Students and parents will visit the Brooklyn Museum of Art to study how architecture is represented in art, and visit the historical homes reconstructed there. Parent/student art projects (2D and 3D) will employ math skills. The project will be documented by parents trained to use video and digital cameras, and will be displayed to the school and community in a culminating festival: Our Community Counts.

Summary of Activities

The goal of PS 20's Parent Academy for Literacy Through the Arts is to communicate with parents about their role in their child's literacy and to show how storytelling and familiarity with a library can equip them with skills to build a supportive bridge between school and home. This is especially important because 40% of PS 20's parents are new immigrants from China, Latin America and Bangladesh and not familiar with American society, language or culture. This year's program will include a storytelling/book making and library resource workshop series that will include reading books aloud, author studies, parents reading their books and a culminating Parent Recognition event.

Summary of Activities

P 162 will partner with The Studio Museum in Harlem to provide three opportunities for parents to engage in a variety of activities that are designed to inform parents of the school’s arts curriculum. Parents will participate in arts-related activities at the Museum, meet participating artists and art teachers, participate in hands-on workshops at PTA meetings sponsored by Readers Theatre Workshop, and discover how the school’s arts programs supplement the school’s mission to serve students with special needs. We will jointly sponsor Discover Harlem Month.

Parents and artists will develop a curriculum that integrates visual arts, the study of culture, science, and literacy. There will be several events in which families can participate. During a Family Museum Trip to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, families will view and discuss the Chinese scholar's garden, a Chinese painting of a garden, and a piece of Noguchi sculpture. At the next event, we will meet in PS 117's garden and discuss the historical significance and aesthetics of the PAP impressionistic mural "Hills North of Jamaica, 1905" that we created last year. We will also conduct a Garden is Art poetry reading. Finally, we will end the program with a session with a parent-artist. PS 120 offers parents the opportunity to investigate cultural organizations in NYC through parent trips and workshops. The workshops provide the curriculum integration component for the parent. The parent then becomes the teacher as they return to those organizations with their children providing the children with the educational connection. Additionally, PS 120's "Bringing the Arts to the School" will offer residency programs for children and parents in the classroom. These residencies afford the parent and the child a long-term capacity to communicate about the arts.

Summary of Activities

"Rediscovering America" is a journey parents, children and educators will make together. We will explore what it means to be an American and how that is expressed through the arts. We will look at America through the paintings of Norman Rockwell and the photographs of Gypsies in Queens by Yale Strom. We will create family trees and write our own American stories. We will come together to sing and dance. As a school rich in diverse cultural traditions, we will reflect on what it really means to live in America.

Summary of Activities

This partnership’s theme, “A Sculpture Garden of Promise”, facilitates the interdisciplinary integration of art, math and science into family life and the community arena for 25 parent/student partnership teams. Each program phase allows parent/student teams to learn that art takes on many unique forms, can easily be translated into daily activities, and can become financially sustainable as well. In Phase I (hands on art creation) each partner team creates an original cement art sculpture. Phase II (art integration) has them placing their sculptures within 2 sculptured gardens; one for MS 180, and the other for a community senior citizens facility. In Phase III (art auction), partners learn art economics by pricing, marketing and auctioning off art work at a PTA event. Auction proceeds will then be used to help fund the 2003 Partners program.

Summary of Activities

Through a series of thematic workshops entitled “Family Heritage”, we will empower parents in exploring the natural connection between the Arts and Social Studies. With a variety of professional artists in the areas of visual arts, storytelling and percussion, parents will study personal narrative within a cultural context. Parents will then choose to “share” their family story/tradition via visual arts, storytelling, or percussion. With MS 202 being re-zoned in the 2002-2003 school year, families of feeder schools will be invited to participate as well. Culminating activities will include a public performance and a mini-museum at the last Parents Association meeting of the year. Our parents as arts partners will be celebrated at this final meeting with public recognition of accomplishment.

Summary of Activities

Our program incorporates certain assumptions about arts learning that will give the arts a more prominent role in the lives of our families. Building on the belief that the arts need not be experienced in isolation from each other, we are incorporating cross-disciplinary learning experiences that transcend the traditional isolation of art forms. This will be accomplished by providing a circus arts program that integrates skills such as movement, circus, drama, literacy, visual arts, and music.

Summary of Activities

Staten Island Zoo’s teaching artist, Kristi Pfister, will host a ninety-minute tour of the zoo for families to see how live subject matter can be translated into mosaic imagery. After the tour, Ms. Pfister will conduct a series of four two-hour family workshops at the Hungerford School that will result in the creation of a ceramic mosaic. Upon completion, this mosaic will be installed in our school for permanent display. We will celebrate the installation at an opening reception for the entire Hungerford community.
