

THE CENTER FOR ARTS EDUCATION

On Thursday, February 21st, WNYC's Leonard Lopate interviewed CAE's Richard Kessler and NYC Councilmember Robert Jackson about their views on the current state of arts education in the New York City public schools.

Discussion topics included:

- How school testing and legislation like NCLB affect arts education programs
- The impact of the recent budget cuts on arts education
- How parents, teachers and NY citizens can support arts education
- The positive links between arts education and academic achievement
- And much more...

If you missed it, click here to listen to the full segment or visit www.wnyc.org.